My check engine light comes on periodically, but usually goes away once I turn my car off. So of course the other day it decided to stay on permanently. I got it checked with an OBD scanner, and my codes were P1529 and P0715, which is something with a transmission control module and a speed sensor, nothing to do with actual emissions.

The Best Way to Check out a Used Car Before Buying It ...

To check out a used car before buying it, thoroughly examine the outside of the car to make sure the frame isn't damaged and there aren't any scratches, dents, or rust spots. You should also check underneath the car to make sure it isn't rusted. Also, look under the hood for any noticeable dents, damage, or rust, which could be a bad sign. Don't forget to test drive the car and check the
