Within the context of mathematical modelling, fast variable elimination is one of the central tools with which one can simplify a multivariate problem. When used in the context of of deterministic systems, the theory is quite standard, but when stochastic effects are present, it becomes less straightforward to apply.

Let us postulate that there is some large parameter N which is both inversely proportional to the reaction rates and some measure of the typical size of the system. In the case of the Moran model this is specifically the size of the system, though in general it could be
